Message from the President

Dear ISAAC Members:

As I write this in early December, it is just days after the passing of one of the world's great figures, Nelson Mandela. Mandela's story is an extraordinary example of patience, compassion, vision, and determination under the most dire of circumstances. Despite 27 years of imprisonment and isolation, upon obtaining his freedom Mandela was able to speak with calm and compassion to lead his fractured country and transform it into a nation based on democracy, freedom, and human rights. His resolve and understanding of the human condition stand as an example to all of us.

In similar ways ISAAC members around the globe struggle against isolation, neglect, and ignorance to ensure that our fellow human beings have a voice for self-expression, self-determination and participation as members of their communities. While our efforts rarely receive the attention of broader human rights movements they are indeed essential acts of civility and humanity that reflect on the best attributes of our species. In my decades of professional experience, I have met and worked with many people who were virtual prisoners of their inability to communicate. When finally given their voice through AAC, these individuals have been fired with a keen passion to change the world so no one else will have to endure the silence they did. In our communities people who use AAC push the boundaries, and present themselves as living examples of the triumph of communication over silence; they are the public face of AAC; they are the spark of Mandela in our midst.

In other developments around the globe, world leaders from Barack Obama to the Pope continue to highlight the current economic situation and the challenges for equitable distribution of wealth and opportunity. In many countries, economic crises are resulting in significant cuts to social, education, and health services. For people who use AAC these cuts are particularly painful and damaging. Ironically while these messages of inequity are being delivered by world leaders, the technology giants that manufacture much of the base technology for AAC (e.g., tablets and computing hardware) are posting record profits of multi-billions of dollars.

One of ISAAC's primary roles as an organization is advocating for improved conditions for people who use AAC, and expanded awareness of the importance of communication and self-determination. As ISAAC members we have a unique perspective on the fragility of the human condition and our interdependence. Imagine what we might be able to achieve for people who use AAC across the globe if we could share in the most infinitesimal fraction of the huge profits generated by the likes of Apple or Samsung - what a world of difference it would make to so many. ISAAC members are a diverse group, connected to all parts of the human community across the globe. It is our responsibility to be the Mandela spark as we speak with our families, friends, colleagues, and acquaintances in all walks of life to promote the change we know we must see and instill the consciousness of human potential and AAC in those who have the power and means to make change happen.

It is my hope that ISAAC members will work together to fan these sparks into bright lights in the spirit of humanity and calm resolve of Nelson Mandela.

May the coming New Year bring only the best of health, happiness, and prosperity to you all.

Best wishes,
Jeff

DESCOBRIR A COMUNICAÇÃO – DISCOVER COMMUNICATION!

As I look at the calendar, I realize that our 2014 Conference in Lisbon, Portugal, is a mere 7 months away! I want to express my tremendous thanks to Heather Stonehouse, Teraiz El-Deir, Judy Shapiro, and Tony Needer, for their help and support in moving the organization of our conference forward. I also want to thank our Executive Board, members of Council, Conference 2014 Leadership, including our Conference Co-Chairs, and the army of volunteers for all of their efforts, wisdom, and support these past months.

ISAAC International's 2014 Conference paper submission online system has now officially closed. Opening on June 3rd, 2013, the system was originally scheduled to close on October 15th, 2013. By popular demand, the deadline was extended until November 15th, 2013. The paper review process has now begun, and is being ably led by the ISAAC Research Committee. Paper reviews will be completed in time to have acceptance notifications sent by February 15th, 2014. We were absolutely amazed by the number of papers submitted, particularly those during the last 36 hours that the portal was open!

Thanks also to everyone who has taken the time to complete and submit an application for one of ISAAC's travel assistance grants, as well as the Outstanding Consumer Lecture. The applications are now being reviewed, and all applicants will be notified on progress and results.

December 2013 is also the month that the online registration system for our conference is scheduled to go live. Accessed through the ISAAC website at <https://www.isaac-online.org/english/conference-2014/>, it will allow for conference registration and payment, as well as hotel reservations and deposit payments. Please make sure that you take advantage of our early-bird registration rates, which will only be in effect until February 21st, 2014.

On behalf of ISAAC International, I attended the United Nations High-level meeting of the General Assembly on disability and development. It took place in New York at the United Nations Headquarters, on September 23rd, 2013, and my attendance at this important meeting was in support of our organization, its membership, and our non-governmental (NGO) status with the UN Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC). It was clear from the way General Assembly delegates spoke, that the development of the post-2015 disability agenda is viewed with great importance by representatives from both developing and developed countries. The developing world is clearly looking forward to taking advantage of technologies, techniques, and processes that will assist them in securing a better position for individuals with disabilities within their own countries. The developed world also wants to assist, by sharing their own experiences and best practices with countries in the developing world. ISAAC, along with the other NGOs represented at these meetings, looks forward to finding more ways of influencing the public agenda in these areas.

We were pleased to see all of the International AAC Awareness Month activities that took place during October. Please check the ISAAC International website for the entire list of activities and materials that were submitted to us. If you have materials for activities not already listed, please feel free to forward them directly to Heather Stonehouse.

As always, I welcome your thoughts and feedback. Please do not hesitate to contact me directly at franklin@isaac-online.org should you require any further information or assistance.

Dr. Bronwyn Hemsley @BronwynHemsley recently received a Discovery Early Career Researcher Award from the Australian Research Council. This research, starting in 2014, will evaluate the impact of training designed to increase the use of Twitter for information exchange among people who have little or no speech and who need information for better inclusion, empowerment and evidence-informed decision-making. With as many as seven per cent of Australians having a physical and/or communication disability and being disenfranchised from information, Twitter offers a valuable form of social media allowing short segments of text communication that bypass impaired speech. Outcomes will inform policies and practices in training vulnerable populations to use social media for increased information exchange and will promote inclusion of all people with disabilities in social media campaigns. For information about the study and how you may participate, please contact Bronwyn directly at bronwyn.hemsley@newcastle.edu.au.

Report from ISAAC-Israel

*Submitted by:
Judy Seligman-
Wine, Founder and Past Chairperson of ISAAC-ISRAEL.*

For many years ISAAC-ISRAEL has led the initiative to request the inclusion of communication devices within the Basket of Services which are recognized and funded by the Ministry of Health in our country. A critical issue which emerged from the submission in 2012 was the question as to whether communication tools are medical devices.

With the assistance of ISAAC colleagues from around the world, we accumulated evidence, with particular reference to the American FDA, showing that they are medical devices. (Wheelchairs and hearing aids have long been accepted as medical devices within this same context.) This year, with the assistance of a public relations company experienced in medical lobbying, we once again submitted a request, supported by research evidence, to have high-end communication devices together with access technology (for example, eye-gaze systems) funded by the health system. Yonit Karnieli, a past ISAAC -ISRAEL Chairperson, participated in the deliberations of a Health Ministry Advisory Committee, in which it was accepted that communication tools are indeed medical devices.

Despite this, on November 25, 2013, the preliminary report from the deliberations as to which new technologies will be included in the Basket in 2014 indicated that our request was being transferred to the National Insurance Institute for its possible consideration. This sidetracking is totally unacceptable and we are now preparing a formal appeal for re-consideration of the issue. We are also organizing a demonstration outside the offices where the Committee is meeting, as well as media coverage. We shall not let the voices of persons who communicate using AAC go unheard because of financial restraints.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all our colleagues from around the world, with particular thanks to Lew Golinker and Sarah Blackstone, for all their assistance in this mission.

ISAAC-Israel has launched a Facebook campaign in support of this initiative. To show your support, please “like” ISAAC-Israel on Facebook.

GREETINGS FROM DOWN UNDER!

As AAC awareness month has just passed, ISAAC Australia is excited to celebrate the success of SCOPE Victoria's silent morning tea campaign. Tea drinkers at 143 events around Australia learned more about the AAC community and were encouraged to try using alternate forms of communication while they socialized. Those who hosted a tea within Australia also received a post-pack of resources and ISAAC Australia pens to distribute at local events. A guest post on ISAAC Australia's blog provides additional details.

Also for AAC awareness month, ISAAC Australia hosted a live Twitter chat on October 14th to discuss AAC, particularly topical issues within the Australian ISAAC community. People around the world took part in this chat. Participants identified some key AAC awareness messages, and talked about the use and usefulness of Twitter in the AAC community. The complete discussion can be viewed online at: <http://storify.com/bronwynah/aacaware-for-october-we-are>.

Finally, ISAAC Australia celebrated its half-century membership this past September with a total of 51 members! We would also like to welcome our newly established neighbouring organization, Thailand, which we were thrilled to support through ISAAC's "Five and Five" membership program for individuals from emerging AAC and developing countries. We look forward to working with president Nitha Ungsuprasert and her team in the future.

AAC AWARENESS IN TAIWAN: A TWSAAC REPORT

Dr. Pat Mirenda from the University of British Columbia, Canada, was invited to present a topic on "A Picture is Worth 1,000 Words: Visual Supports for Individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder." The event took place at the School of Speech Language Pathology and Audiology of Chung Shan Medical University in Taichung City, Taiwan, on October 31st. About 40 students and AAC practitioners participated in this session.

Dr. Mirenda was invited to the Maria MAMA Hand Made Bread for a light lunch (served by individuals with disabilities) with the AAC practitioners of the Maria Social Welfare Foundation. Dr. Meng-Ju Tsai, the President of The Taiwan Society for

The Asia Pacific Society for the Study of Speech, Language and Hearing invited Dr. Pat Mirenda as a keynote speaker at the AAC International Symposium on November 2nd. Her presentation was on "AAC Assessment Issues for Individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder." More than 200 domestic and international scholars, practitioners, and students participated in her session. In the afternoon, over 150 participated in a three-hour AAC Master Class sponsored by Utechzone Co., Ltd., which was titled "Overview and decision-making" and "AAC access techniques."
